Police arrive to arrest Peter

Rob frames Peter!

When new evidence is found, Tina's killer moves quickly to ensure that the finger of suspicion is pointed elsewhere...

As the police continue their investigations into the charm bracelet found in the ginnel this week, Rob worries that he's given the game away when he snaps at Tracy for making a throwaway comment about Tina's untimely death. So he decides it's time to divert suspicion elsewhere... 'Peter has no idea that Rob was the one who killed Tina,' explains Chris Gascoyne, who plays the desperate drunk. 'But they've always hated each other, so it doesn't come as a massive surprise that Rob is now pointing the finger at him.' And as it turns out, his brother-in-law doesn't have to try very hard to frame him as when the missing charm from the bracelet is found outside No 1, it has Peter's fingerprints all over it and it's not long before he's arrested on suspicion of Tina's murder. 'It all happens on the Street and Simon sees the whole thing,' says Chris. 'He's crying out for his dad, and that's what makes Peter crumble. It breaks his heart that his son witnesses him being carted off by the police, but it's clear the evidence is stacked against him in more ways than one. He's in real trouble.' Remanded in custody, Peter's gutted to realise that even Deirdre and Tracy assume that he must be guilty. 'Peter feels he's losing every ounce of support and it makes him question what he has to fight for,' sighs Chris. 'He's a weak man anyway and without Carla behind him, I believe he thinks that he might as well be in prison as he feels he has nothing outside.' With Peter on the point of giving up, has Rob got away with murder?

Lloyd has a heart-to-heart with Andrea

Man trouble

Despite her best efforts, Andrea's attempts to juggle her husband and her lover seem doomed to failure...

Andrea realises that her double life is about to catch up with her when Lloyd returns from his holiday and tells her it's time they made their relationship official by moving in together. So she reluctantly agrees, but tries to buy herself time by claiming she'll have to discuss it with her daughter first. 'Lloyd's had his heart broken in the past, but he really thinks Andrea is the one that might change it all for him,' says Craig Charles, who plays him. 'In front of him she's all happy and positive about moving in — he just can't see the inner turmoil that she's going through and doesn't suspect she's hiding anything at all.' However, all Andrea's efforts to conceal the truth have been in vain as when she and Steve have a drink to celebrate their course results, Neil walks in! Although she helps her cover her tracks, Michelle decides to confide in Steve and, devastated, he determines that Lloyd needs to know the truth. But how will he react?

Maria and Marcus say their goodbyes

PLUS

Maria and Marcus agree to part as friends as he sadly prepares to leave the Street forever. Despite Norris' warnings that he's just using Tina's death to worm his way back into her affections, it seems Rita is oblivious to her husband's latest cunning plan to get his feet back under her table. Will she listen?
