1 Brenda Blethyn brushed up on her Four Seasons knowledge when she attended the Gala Night of Jersey Boys to celebrate the show's recent move to the Piccadilly Theatre following its six-year run at the Prince Edward.

Broadway hit comedy Good People is now enjoying an equally successful run in London's Noël Coward Theatre. At the first night party, the play's star 2 Imelda Staunton joined husband Jim Carter for a much-earned tippie whilst cast-mate 3 Angel Coulby enjoyed some quiet time away from the crowds.

Rabbits around the capital were quaking in their boots as Fatal Attraction crept into town. The new stage adaptation of the 1987 film – which introduced the term 'bunny boiler' into our vocabulary – had the audience on the edge of their seats. 4 But it was clearly a happy ending for stars Natascha McElhone, Mark Bazeley and Kristin Davis at the post-show party.

Theatre legend Angela Lansbury proved that age has not diminished her stage prowess. 5 The octogenarian actress, who plays Madame Arcati in the new production of Coward's Blithe Spirit, looked elegant and relaxed at the show's opening night. And adding a further slice of vintage glamour were co-stars 6 Jemima Rooper, 7 Charles Edwards and Janie Dee.
