

Rapper smells a rat as viewers force him to face fear in TV trial

A Tinchy bit scary

by JENNI MCKNIGHT

TINCHY STRYDER wasn't happy when viewers voted for him to endure his first bush tucker trial in I'm A Celebrity... Get Me Out Of Here!

The rapper was 'worried' he would be forced to face his biggest fear – rats.

As he entered the chamber of horrors trial, to win food for his campmates, the 28-year-old told show hosts Ant & Dec: 'I'm really scared of rats... I don't want no rats.'

Entering the first 'chamber', Stryder was met by menacing mud crabs. He was then ushered into a room filled with rotting meat and thousands of flies.

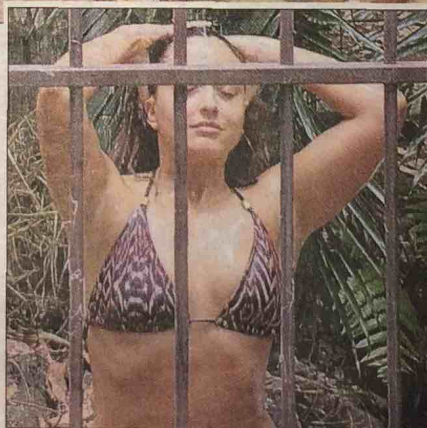

Stryder also came face-to-face with a large monitor lizard, which thrashed its tail at him

FORMER celebrity jungle contestant Peter Andre hinted he was 'embarrassed' to be the face of Iceland when he appeared on panel show Celebrity Juice. However, dismissing calls for him to resign, the supermarket chain said he was a 'top bloke' and tweeted: 'He was just joking.'

wildly as he searched for rewards. Find out how he did by tuning in to I'm A Celebrity... Get Me Out Of Here on ITV tonight at 9pm.

Meanwhile, model Nadia Forde is fast winning admirers by showering in a bikini.

JUNGLE HOOKED
PAGE 45 >>

In hot water: Tinchy Stryder faces his fears in a chamber of horrors TV trial, while (left) Nadia Forde wins some admirers by taking a shower in her bikini

PICTURES: REX

Writer can't Bear a PG Paddington

PADDINGTON Bear's creator is 'totally amazed' after the film version of the books was said to contain sex references.

Author Michael Bond, 88, has not yet seen the movie, which has been given a PG rating.

But after hearing about the 'mild adult content', he said: 'I'd be very upset. I can't imagine what the sex references are.'

Film classification chiefs have since changed their consumer guidance from 'mild sex references' to 'innuendo'.

Wall is over... end to Lennon tribute

PRAGUE'S colourful wall in memory of John Lennon has been painted over.

The wall in the heart of the Czech capital began to be painted with Lennon's image and related graffiti after the Beatle's assassination in 1980.

It became a symbol of anti-communist opposition and, later, a tourist attraction.

A group of art students said they were responsible for painting it white and leaving a single message: 'Wall is over!'

Premier League TV investigated

PREMIER LEAGUE TV rights are being investigated by the broadcasting watchdog.

Ofcom's inquiry follows a complaint by Virgin Media that the proportion of matches available for live broadcast – 41 per cent – is lower than other leading leagues.

Virgin says this contributes higher pay TV prices.

Ofcom said it realised many fans enjoy 3pm kick-offs but 'will consider whether there is a breach of competition law'