

What a Lott of Holly

WHEN Holly Golightly of Truman Capote's Breakfast at Tiffany's feels a case of the blues coming on, she heads down to assuage her sorrows at her nearest diamond store. But Pixie Lott, the singer and actress, evidently prefers the Theatre Royal Haymarket. Lott is playing Golightly, the role made famous by Audrey Hepburn in the 1961 classic film, in a new stage adaptation, and was pictured outside this morning ahead of the run, which starts on June 29. Also there were her co-stars Matt Barber and Charlie De Melo, but no sign yet of Cat, the nameless feline that Golightly looks after. If there is still a vacancy, could we recommend Jeremy Corbyn's El Gato?
