RATED
Suede and Saint Etienne are among dozens of bands playing the uber-cool Rockaway Beach festival next weekend at Butlins in Bognor, West Sussex. The capacity is only 3,000, but it's more than a regular festival, with pool parties, silent discos and late-night film screenings.

GOOD WEEK...

The One Direction boys finally came out of hibernation this week, with Harry Styles giving his first solo interview and Niall Horan offering up his first solo single.
Nice to have you back, boys.

Eagles fans are flying high after drummer Don Henley revealed they could reunite, if Glenn Frey's son joins the band. Here's hoping.

Vanessa White has just dropped her new impressive track Low Key, which has already been covered by super cool music sites Complex and Nylon.
A very different sound to The Saturdays... and we love it.

We learnt heaps about Johannesburg's music scene, thanks to Little Simz, who made a fascinating documentary as part of the Nando's Music Exchange.
Not just a talented rapper.

BAD WEEK...

Zoe Ball and Fatboy Slim split this week after 18 years together. But it's not all bad news. Happy to cash in on someone else's misfortune, Tay Tay Starhz, who snogged Zoe when she was drunk at a Christmas party last year, managed to get his face in the papers again, so well done him.

Britney Spears mimed her way through her Apple Music Festival gig, blaming "jet lag" for appearing lacklustre. Her "jet lag" seems to have lasted a decade.

Mum's mad fer her boys

LIAM and Noel Gallagher are rock 'n' roll's most mischievous siblings, whose bitter feud isn't ending any time soon.

GLORY DAYS Noel and Liam

And in a new documentary about Oasis, their mum Peggy lifts the lid on her warring sons, saying: "I've spent my life worrying about them."

She gives fans a rare insight into the rock stars' lives in new flick titled Supersonic.
Speaking in the film, she says: "I think there was that bit of jealousy with Liam and Noel. Noel was beautiful as a baby and then Liam comes along - it takes the limelight off you."

"You could tell disagreement was there with them. I was glad they were in a band together. I would not have wanted Liam in a band without Noel."

"But it all happened too quick." The documentary charts their rise to superstardom, from their early days growing up on a council estate in Manchester, to their two historic gigs at Knebworth in 1996 in front of 250,000 fans.

Peggy, 73, recalls the day Liam came back with a recording contract. "Of course, I thought 'this is great,'" she says. "I never really thought it would go the way it did, though. Liam said: 'All I want, mum, is to earn a bit of money and get myself some new clothes'. And then it all went haywire."

She adds: "He used to sit out there in the kitchen and say 'I'm going to be famous one day and you are going to be really proud of me.'"

Peggy raised Liam, 44, and Noel, 49, along with their older brother Paul on her own after leaving violent dad Tommy.

And Liam praises her, saying: "Mum is an angel and still is. Not impressed by this rock 'n' roll business and rightly so. I wanted to make her proud, and get her to stop doing three fing jobs. Put her feet up and have some nice things."

Noel adds: "When I think of those times, she brought us up on her own really. She gave it all up for us."

Despite being mummy's boys, the film doesn't hold back on hellraising antics. They even recall throwing a whole bedroom out of a hotel window, and accidentally taking crystal meth when they thought it was cocaine at a gig in New York.

The film premieres in London and Manchester tomorrow night with Liam attending by helicopter.

We expect the afterparty to be just as raucous as the old days...

LOUIS LOOSE

Gymnast Louis Smith admits he's been in a lot of pain since the Olympics - because he keeps getting slashed.

The athlete, 27, who launched virtual treasure hunt The Great Gold Hunt this week, has put his self-imposed sex ban on the back burner.

He says: "I was on a stag do and there was lots of drinking games and pain. We went paint balling and on a party cruise and a girl cracked her head and fractured her neck. Lots of pain."

He adds: "Since the Olympics it's been non-stop. I haven't really had a comedown yet. I didn't have to have a sex ban but I wanted to stay focused on my gymnastics. Now it's over I can relax a bit more. I need to get back on the dating wagon. I need to find a suitable wife."
Good luck.

SNAPCHAT

Former X Factor and I'm A Celeb hunk Jake Quickenden chatted to us while launching his new single Get Away With Me, which is out now. You can catch him on his UK tour around the country this month - just don't ask him to do any landscape gardening.

What's your party trick?
I'm unbelievably good at doing an impression of Gollum from The Lord of the Rings.

Tell us a naughty secret: I once built a wall while out in Australia for a guy for money and didn't put any footings down. The guy was ringing me for weeks saying his wall had fallen down.

What were you doing at 3am? Watching UFC with all my mates.

All about Rio

Pixie Lott visited Rio de Janeiro this week - and stocked up on bug spray so she doesn't contract the deadly Zika virus.

The singer performed in the favela of Santa Marta, home to 8,000 people, where Shell is installing solar panels as part of its #makethefuture energy campaign.

She says: "I had to have a couple of jabs and a lot of bug spray. I've been good to go though, it's incredible here."

And former Strictly Come Dancing star Pixie, 25, reckons Anton du Beke, 50, will replace Len Goodman, 72, on the judging panel.

She adds: "I think that Anton would make the best judge. He is very funny so I'm rooting for him."

3 THINGS we learnt about Robbie Williams this week

1 He would do ITV's I'm A Celebrity... Get Me Out of Here! if his career hit the skids. He says: "If I had to, I'd be doing the Jungle, Celebrity Big Brother... I'd be doing all of those things."

2 Never one to shun the limelight, Rob has got his sights set on becoming an X Factor judge. "Working with Mrs O is a treat," he tells Magic Radio host Nick Snaitth. "I think we've got good chemistry on camera. I enjoy those judges' houses days. It's good fun because I'm a frustrated judge, a frustrated TV personality and for those six hours that day, I get to be a judge."

3 And the pop star, who is back with new music, has got a penchant for pubic hair. In particular Kylie Minogue's. He jokes: "Maybe you could get her to cut her pubes and then send them to me?" Vom!
