PIXIE LOTT today said she loves playing to a home crowd – and is returning to perform at the Brentwood Festival.

The 24-year-old singer, who is in the US working on new material for her next album, said she cannot wait to return to the UK to perform in Brentwood, where she lived with her family as a teenager.

She told the Standard: “I’m very excited, that’s why I wanted to do it. Whenever I play to a home crowd it’s so much fun, everyone gets so involved ... I’m really looking forward to Brentwood Festival.”

Lott, pictured, said her sister and other family members will be in the crowd.

Although she said Los Angeles, where she is working, is “fun”, nothing beats the “buzz” of London in the summertime.

She said: “Obviously [there are] friends and family but I quite like the fashion, the shops and cafés, the buzz, especially when London’s sunny, it’s the best ever. Especially when I’ve been away.”

Among the acts also performing at the festival, on July 17-19, are Sister Sledge, Billy Ocean, Rebecca Ferguson, The Human League and Jocelyn Brown. brentwood festival. co.uk
