

Council booze policy

A NEW policy has been adopted by North Tyneside Council to make sure the number of licensed premises in Tynemouth doesn't have a detrimental impact on the local community in the future.

The Cumulative Impact Policy means it now considers whether nuisance or public disorder is likely to arise because of a concentration of licensed premises there.

The council's statutory Licensing Sub-Committee will still consider future applications for licensed premises in line with the statutory process, if a relevant representation has been made. However, committee members will be able to begin their consideration from a presumption to refuse, when considering any application that permits alcohol sales or supply for consumption on the premises in the designated area.

THE Chronicle's Got Talent - in the shape of singing sensations Collabro.

The Britain's Got Talent winners visited the Chronicle offices and treated staff to two songs from their forthcoming debut album.

The quintet, featuring local lad Jamie Lambert, from Washington, sang Let It Go, from Frozen, and the John Legend classic All of Me, to rapturous applause.

Jamie was enjoying being back on home turf and spent the previous night dining out at Big Mussel on Newcastle Quayside with his dad and his partner.

Stars, the debut album, is out on August 18, and the lads will be back on Tyneside for a signing that day at HMV store in the MetroCentre at 5.30pm.
